 TUESDAY EVEN'G, NOV., 1, 1887.

The news from Ohio point to a Democratic victory next Tuesday.

Should Powell win over in Ohio next Tuesday, the victory would shelve Foraker for a while at least.

ELDER E. L. POWELL, of Louisville, has been appointed a member of the interdenominational committee selected to attend the Washington Conference of the Evangelical Alliance.

Just what has been known all along. Those who do not claim he received more votes than Speaker Carlisle, but bases his hopes of success upon alleged violations of the election laws of the State.

Out of about 2,500 presidential offices in the country, Cleveland has filled all but 350 with Democrats. And these "hold-over" Republicans will all walk the plank when the proper time arrives.

A REPUBLICAN victory in Ohio next week will sound the death knell to Sherman's Presidential hopes. It would give Foraker a boom for second place that the Shermanites would never be able to counteract it.

JEFF DAVIS is a right nice old man, but there is no need of the South dragging him to the front every now and then. He is a relic of the "Lost Cause," and the bitter memories of the past are only revived every time he is brought from his privacy.

This country can boast of the largest locomotive works in the world. They are the Baldwin at Philadelphia, and are capable of turning out six hundred locomotives a year. The next largest are at Berlin, with a capacity of three hundred a year.

The demand for railroad cars has been something unprecedented this year. The shops of one company are now turning out forty cars every day, and an order for five hundred additional cars had to be placed with outside builders to supply the company's demands. All this is evidence of prosperous times.

The present year will no doubt go on record as the second greatest year for railroad building ever known in this country. Since the first of January 5,901 miles of track have been laid. In 1882, during the corresponding time, 8,081 miles were laid. The third greatest year was 1881, when, up to October, 5,340 miles of track had been laid.

An exchange says: "If the Republicans elect their ticket in New York and Foraker carries Ohio by an increased majority, Mr. Blaine will come to the front and take command of the Republican party and will be nominated for President next year, with Foraker for Vice President. If the Democrats are successful in New York it will mean the retirement of Mr. Blaine and the advancement of Allison, who is now in the East answering that able free-trade speech he made in Congress a dozen years ago."

Death of Hon. Keene Prichard.
 Hon. Keene F. Prichard, one of the eminent lawyers and politicians of Eastern Kentucky, died at his residence in Catlettsburg at eight o'clock last Saturday evening after a few days' illness of paralysis of the brain. He was about fifty-five years of age, and his wife, two married daughters and a grown son survive him. He was a member of the Baptist Church.

Among the Democratic politicians of this Congressional district the deceased took a prominent rank. He was well known here, and the news of his sudden death will be heard with sincere regret. As a lawyer, he was considered one of the best and most successful in the Big Sandy Valley.

Water Famine in Christian County.
 The drouth the past three or four months in this State has been almost unprecedented. The dry spell set in early and has been a protracted and very severe one in many sections. In some portions of the State the drouth has not yet been broken. A special from Hopkinsville says: "A water famine prevails in Christian County. But little rain has fallen since the first of May, and the springs, rivers, cisterns and wells are about all dry. The people are uneasy. Families are compelled to send their washing to Nashville and Louisville laundries. Several families who find water indispensable for their purposes send miles for it. This deplorable state of affairs has caused considerable loss to corn and tobacco. The farmers are disheartened, and stock roam the pastures vainly in search of water."

EUROPEAN DRINKS.

A BICYCLIST WRITES CONCERNING CONTINENTAL CONCOCTIONS.

The Ale of England, the Wines and Absinthe of France, the Beer of Germany and the Coffee of Turkey—English Mixed Drinks.

Whilst beer and ale might perhaps truthfully be called the national beverage of England even these days, it is far less so than it was some years ago. Englishmen are taking very kindly of late to mixed drinks, and drink almost as much whisky in proportion to malt beverages as we do. The mixed drinks of England differ very materially, however, from those of this country. Shandy-gaff, a mixture of ale and ginger, is a favorite drink among English athletes and frequenters of race courses and summer resorts. Another odd mixture is known as dognose. Dognose consists of two-thirds ale and one-third gin. The consumption of dognose is confined chiefly to the lower classes. It is drunk mostly by old toppers, whose stomachs have swelled with beer and porter and half-ale until these comparatively mild beverages no longer suffice to satisfy their craving. The addition of the fiery and penetrative Old Tom makes a combination that goes home every time in spite of their well seasoned condition.

The custom of drinking ale at meal times in English families has made an unfavorable impression among many American lady visitors. But there is as much to be said in favor of it as against it. Mrs. John Bull reciprocates with even more horror at our pitchers of ice water on the table. Mrs. John Bull would seem to have on her side the best of all arguments, too, a robust constitution and fewer fleshly ills than her ice water drinking sister.

ACROSS THE ENGLISH CHANNEL.

What says Monsieur le Franchman across the English channel? Beer! Take it away! the barbarous stuff, fit only for the gross palates of Germans and Albions. Whisky! A little better; still altogether too gross and solid for the mercurial Frenchman. His favorite tipple is absinthe. This spirituelle beverage floats around in Pierre Macelotte's nervous system, tingles the nerves and causes him to feel patriotic and sans souci. It causes him to shout out in his imagination "Vive la France!" and "On to Berlin!" This is what honest Pierre likes, and since absinthe brings it about, he drinks a good deal of it. Another beverage is tea and rum. "The et rum" is a favorite beverage with the French ladies, who drop into cafes and sip it during the afternoon promenade or when out shopping. The French table d'hôte is familiar enough to many of us here, with its inevitable bouteille de vin ordinaire. This via ordinare, or common claret, may rightfully be considered the national beverage of La Belle France, for everybody drinks it. In the common country hotels it flows almost as free as water.

Passing into Germany, it seems hardly worth while to remind the reader of German lager. Everybody knows what is the national beverage of the Fatherland. The good people of some German cities will give freely of it as their husbands and brothers. The shopgirl or milliner's assistant in Munich will trip into the neighboring beer hall at noon, and take for luncheon a quart mug of beer and a piece of bread and a radish. In the evening she wanders with her sweetheart into an al fresco beer garden and passes hour after hour listening to the band and drinking beer. For dinner she has probably consumed the second or third quart of beer since morning and a Frankfurter sausage sandwich. The natural result of so much beer drinking in proportion to solid food taken is to give the people of Munich a kind of flabby appearance, and to make them drowsy. The whole city seems to be in a semi-comatose condition. The cabmen fall asleep so often on their boxes that the municipal authorities have found it necessary to impose fines upon hackdrivers found asleep at their post. Notwithstanding the universal consumption of beer, however, the Germans of the wealthier class drink a good deal of schnapps.

HUNGARY—BULGARIA—TURKEY.

Beer holds its own all through Austria to beyond Vienna, but wine and liquors usurp the throne again in Hungary. All down the valley of the Danube below Budapest the red foam bluffs fairly ooze the rich wine of Hungary. Every town and village has its adjacent vineyards, and every village gothaus or city hotel has an al fresco vine garden. Here the good people congregate at an evening and pass the hours away drinking wine, gossiping and listening to the weird music of a Hungarian Gypsy band. As in France, the Hungarian peasant makes merry on red wine that only the well to do of most countries can afford to drink ad libitum.

Beer, wine and schnapps are common enough all down through Slavonia and the lower Danubian provinces, but a change takes place when one gets fairly into the Balkan peninsula. One now gets among the unspeakable Orientals whose ways are not as our ways. Sherbet, mastic and coffee are the beverages of Bulgaria, Roumelia and Turkey. The former may be merely a glass of water in which a lump of sugar has been dissolved, or may be a concoction of fruit, sugar and rose water, or of various mixtures between these two extremes. The drink called mastic is said to be a preparation of imported Boston rum and gum mastic. It is a vile liquor, and about as deadly as the "bug juice" of the Rocky mountain saloons, but makes an agreeable tasting beverage when mixed with several times its bulk of water.

Kahvey (coffee), however, is the national beverage of Turkey. It is served in tiny cups, holding no more than a couple of tablespoonfuls each. The coffee is ground into fine flour and used with such liberality that the beverage is quite thick. It is served scalding hot, and is imbued by touching the lips cautiously to the edge of the cup and sipping it out with the weariness of a person who has known all too often what it is to burn the mouth.—Thomas Stevens in New York Mail and Express.

EMBEZZLER ADAMSON.

He Claims He Did Not Run Away—Interesting Developments Promised.
 BEDFORD, Ind., Nov. 1.—Deputy Sheriff Robert Day arrested Ziba Adamson Saturday on the charge of embezzlement. The grand jury found the bill week before last. This brings up the celebrated Blackburn-Adamson case. He is one of the principal actors in that case. He skipped the country at that time to avoid arrest.
 Adamson was administrator for several estates, and during his absence he sent his bondsmen a bond for a deed for a large tract of land in Indian Creek township, to reimburse them for the money they would or were to pay for his shortage. He came back to this county about a year ago, and then his bondsmen demanded possession of the real estate. He refused. There is a case now pending in the circuit court for possession. They paid his shortage, but did not do away with the crime of embezzlement, so they went before the grand jury and had Adamson indicted.

The sheriff went with him to Indian Creek township Saturday afternoon to get bail, and they rode over the whole eastern part of the township, but failed to get bond. As the sheriff started to jail with Adamson he said to John Pinkson: "You said the jail door would never close behind me." He also asked the sheriff to shoot him, and on the road said he would tell his side of the story; that he was innocent, and the guilty ones were free. "I never ran away from this county; I was run away," he said, and promised for the future some interesting reading that will implicate several gentlemen in high standing in this county. He now lies in jail and refuses to eat anything.

A Highly Successful Sneak.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 1.—About 10:30 this morning an unknown sneak thief entered the office of the park commissioners in City hall, and stole a bag containing $3,200 during the temporary absence of the secretary, Gen. William F. Rogers, who had obtained the money to pay off the park employees. The thief made a dash down stairs and got away with the plunder. This is the last day in office of Gen. Rogers as secretary of the board, he having resigned to accept the superintendency of the Soldiers' home.

A Spirited Debate.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—Rev. Dr. McGlynn and John Lloyd Thomas, of Baltimore, had a spirited debate at the Cooper Union Saturday upon the relative importance to humanity of prohibition and the single land tax. The house was filled. At the conclusion of Dr. McGlynn's speech, it was evident that his opponent was no match for him either in argument or oratory. Mr. Thomas confined himself to making a speech in favor of prohibition and presented few arguments relative to the single tax theory.

Four Men Instantly Killed.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—It is learned that an explosion at McGinnesville, N. J., occurred at the First powder mill, situated Hopatcong, N. J. Four men were instantly killed and it is believed many injured. Intense excitement prevails. A crowd has gathered the debris.

Pithy Points From Washington.

We have the statement from one of Fleming County's most prominent and reliable citizens that never since he has lived there, and that has been all his life, has there been anything approaching the good times they are having since prohibition went into effect.

People who never before had a barrel of flour in their houses, now have them, and women who scarcely had a new calico dress a year, may now be seen with new dresses on.

Now who can find it in their hearts to begrudge these poor people these simple necessities and comforts, and to wish ever again to saddle on them the terrible enormity and curse of rum?

Just as certainly as temperance and frugality lead to prosperity and plenty, and intemperance and vice lead to pauperism and crime, just so sure is it that prohibition does away with whisky and three-legged chairs, and puts whole furniture and barrels of flour in their stead.

The proof is positive from all sections where prohibition has carried off the great gain to prosperity, to peace and quiet, and, indeed, to everything which is of value and good report among men.

A Foolish Question.

Violent rain-storm—crowded street-car—handsome lady and gentleman on platform: Gentleman (to those inside)—Can you squeeze a lady in there? Chorus of Mail Voices—Yes, certainly. Lady goes in—gets squeezed.
